Tamra Woodworth, M.D.

Board Certified
Pediatrics

Born and raised in suburban Milwaukee, Wisconsin, Dr. Woodworth graduated from Valparaiso University with a degree in both biology and chemistry. After two years of physiology research at Indiana University, she entered medical school at Indiana University School of Medicine, graduating with her degree in 2001.

Dr. Woodworth completed both her internship and residency in pediatrics at Indiana University Medical Center in Indianapolis with training mainly at Riley Hospital for Children, but also at Methodist and Wishard hospitals where she was exposed to all subspecialties of pediatric medicine as well as community pediatrics. Her three years of training in general pediatrics concluded in 2004.

For four years following her residency (2004-2008), Dr. Woodworth was an assistant professor of clinical pediatrics/emergency medicine at Indiana University, working in the Riley Hospital for Children Emergency Medicine and Trauma Center where she cared for acutely ill and injured children, as well as helped train and educate pediatric residents. Although maintaining an interest in urgent care, Dr. Woodworth also enjoys pediatric preventive care and educating children and their families.

Dr. Woodworth is both board certified by the American Board of Pediatrics and a Fellow of the American Academy of Pediatrics.

Outside of pediatrics, she enjoys traveling, tennis, walking, photography, art, flower arranging, playing the piano and spending time with her dog.
