Board Certified

Orthopedic Surgeon

Jeffery L. Pierson, M.D., received his medical training at Johns Hopkins University School of Medicine following undergraduate education at DePauw University. He completed his residency in orthopedic surgery at The Hospital for Special Surgery in New York City, and his orthopedic fellowship in total hip and knee replacement at Harvard.

Dr. Pierson is a member of the American Academy of Orthopedic Surgeons and the American Association of Hip and Knee Surgeons. Dr. Pierson limits his practice to conditions involving hip/knee arthritis and/or joint replacements. Joint replacement is Dr. Pierson's passion because of the positive outcome it has. "It's rewarding to be an expert in something that has shown to consistently improve the patient's quality of life," says Dr. Pierson.

Dr. Pierson is the medical director of the St. Vincent Orthopedic Center, and has been on staff at St. Vincent Indianapolis and Carmel hospitals since 1992. He is past president of the St. Vincent Medical Staff. He is currently serving on the St. Vincent Indianapolis Hospital Board and the St. Vincent Foundation Board.

In his spare time, Dr. Pierson enjoys non-competitive running and fly fishing for trout out West.
